

- UX Research
- Overview
- Blog
- Space Settings
- SPACE SHORTCUTS
- LegalShield
- Product Development
- Design
- PAGES
- UX Research Process
- UX Research
- UX Research Meetings
 - The Most Dangerous
 - The Most Dangerous 2019
 - The Most Dangerous 202...
 - The Most Dangerous- 20...
 - The Most Dangerous 202...
 - 1:1
 - Catch Up Meetings
 - Misc.
 - UX Research Artifacts
 - UX Research Tasks
 - UX Research Tools & Resources
 - Test
- Archived pages

The Most Dangerous

Created by David Luna
Last updated Jun 18, 2020 by Gaia Boyd • 1 min read • Analytics

The Most Dangerous is a weekly meeting of UX Researchers with the purpose of creating common understanding across the Research team, with the intention of keeping everyone on the team working cohesively in service of progress towards team goals. It is secondarily time for feedback and collaboration on the specifics of research work done for various projects. We could discuss several things, in the following order of priority.

- Updates from leadership on items affecting the team's work
- General company updates pertaining the LS employees
- Review progress made toward team goals in the last week
 - Discuss obstacles and opportunities
- Bring up research plans or reports for feedback and troubleshooting

Everyone on the UX Research team is encouraged to add items to the agenda! The discussion is open to topics not relevant to the above, though at the end of the priority.

Like Be the first to like this product_development x design x ux_research x meetings x

Write a comment...